

AUSTRALIAN BOOK REVIEW

Home access

Library access

What is ABR?

Australian Book Review (ABR) is one of Australia's major cultural magazines. It presents high-quality journalism and new writing for the widest possible audience.

It provides a needed forum for new Australian writers and reviewers, and it is committed to raising the standard of arts criticism in Australia.

ABR publishes reviews, essays, commentaries, interviews and new creative writing. The magazine is national in readership, authorship, distribution, events and partners. It is available in print and online via ABR Online.

What can I use it for?

Browse Australian Book Review to find the current and past issues, participate in writing competitions and to read exclusive fiction by well-known Australian authors. ABR can also be used to find reviews for a range of entertainment, including theatre, opera, dance and film and to read comprehensive interviews with prolific authors, publishers and critics.

To get started, go to the following web address and click on 'Australian Book Review' for free access:

<https://www.hawkesbury.nsw.gov.au/library/elibrary/information-and-reference-online>

Special features

- Prestigious writing competitions
- Writing fellowships offered
- In-depth interviews with Australian authors
- Subscribe to 'book of the week'

